Quality • Value • Service since 1957

The IWC tradition of quality spans more than 50 years and began in 1957 when the company opened its doors in Cookeville, Tennessee. A year later, in 1958, Jimmy W. Mackie bought half-interest in the small distributing company that had already amassed annual sales of about $100,000. In 1959, Mr. Mackie purchased the other half of the business. At that time, IWC had one salesman, one deliveryman and one delivery truck. From that point on, IWC grew steadily, adding sales associates, territory, products and equipment.

1968 was a milestone year in that IWC constructed a new warehouse. This allowed the company to operate more efficiently and to offer more products to its customers. In 1969, IWC joined Frosty Acres Brands food-buying cooperative to market the successful Frosty Acres product, leverage its purchasing power and expand its product variety.

Today IWC operates in a modern, 165,000-square-foot warehouse and distribution facility and has grown from just a handful of workers to 200 full-time employees and 50 distribution vehicles. The company provides a broad line of food products and food service supplies and equipment to customers in 60 counties in middle Tennessee and southern Kentucky. To this day, IWC enjoys being family owned, with Mr. Mackie and his two sons, John and Bob, helping to run the company on a daily basis.
